

The Day I Almost Died!

By: Daniella Daoud

I walk home from school almost every day, but it has never gotten more intense than last Friday. My friend and I were about to cross the street, but we were waiting like ten minutes for the light to turn green. Then Sophie says, "Why don't we just cross, there are no cars anyway?" Sophie bolted across the street while I just waited there. I looked to my side and saw that a guy in a blue Corvette was signaling for me to go, so I went. But of course, I didn't check to see if any cars were coming. As I was walking down the road, all I saw was about twenty cars stopping and honking their horn. I completely froze, in the middle of traffic! The guy in the Corvette started laughing and every person that was driving by gave me the dirtiest look. Once the light turned green, I walked across the road with my face almost as red as a tomato.
